Diversity in American classrooms is rapidly increasing each year. Think about how you can further incorporate diversity into your lessons. What can you do to reach your students where they are, and help them to master the necessary academic concepts for advancement? What can you do to facilitate awareness and understanding between cultures?

Below is a checklist for creating classrooms that embraces diversity, and therefore, a school that strives for the success of all its students.

- How often do you discuss, explore and learn from cultures other than your own majority culture?
- How often do you use a variety of learning techniques that seek to speak to students with different learning styles?
- Do the wonders of technology aid your teaching instruction?
- How often do you include “hands-on” learning experiences for your students?
- Do you sometimes assess the biases that are sometimes hidden in teaching styles and learning methods?
- Do you provide various options for different students in work assignments?
- Do you encourage group work and assignments among groups of students?
- How diverse or flexible is your teaching style?
- Does your school value and celebrate diversity?
- Does your faculty and administration represent diversity in skills and backgrounds?

For more details and information about this diversity checklist visit the RaceBridges Studio website: https://bit.ly/2Hcl6W4

This is one of a series of RaceBridges Reminders about inclusive behavior and learning to create a safe place of care and welcome among the human family. Nourish your better angels: visit the RaceBridges site for a wide mosaic of free materials, videos and ideas to connect and cooperate: RaceBridgesStudio.com